The US and its NATO allies are reluctant to recognise the truth in part because they have invested so much in a failed strategy. In a year before Nigeria's independence, a year-old student helped colour the country's identity. Your recently viewed items and featured recommendations.

John Sopko, who leads the independent watchdog, wrote in SIGAR's latest quarterly report.

This would mean success for certain Pakistani strategists but would carry the risk of a new civil war in Afghanistan, a humanitarian crisis and emigration, and full destabilisation of the country, creating more opportunity for terrorist organisations. Withoutabox Submit to Film Festivals.
