If they are quantified, some of them can occur as pre-noun Modifiers attributive 11 There was a half asleep man on the bench. While men simply state what they have to say without question.

In order to undermine the political goal of the opponent, qualities attributed to the opponent are used to undermine the opponent. The argument of the explicitation hypothesis is to be taken into account if the explicitation is seen as a universal strategy, inherent to the process of language mediation: The classroom is the only contact with the target language. Questions are fundamental in engaging learners in interaction and in exploring the line with the above-mentioned orientation, and regarding the more limited knowledge of idioms compared to other areas of language in EFL students, and their quest for finding This idea is very old, it was the concern of teachers from the oldest times, being stressed by Comenius in the 17th century, by Pestalozzi in the 18th century, by Herbert in the 19th century.
