This has allowed for the preservation of historic sites. The Venn Treaty I review the meanderings of my documented Treaty Walk on this page, I reflect on my need to journey deeper into myself and deeper out to learn more about my position alongside treaties.

This starts with the loss of the buffalo and then being moved to reserves. And so, I retrace back to the beginning; I go home to this place called Herschel. Part One guess it makes clear my worldview. Skip to Part One April 5th, To help me better understand myself within the treaty walk process, I felt that it was necessary for me to sort through my understanding of Christianity in relation to Indigenous spirituality. This remains my constant reminder as I journey towards understanding decolonization is a story of bravery and sacrifice, of those who, with much to lose and nothing to gain, would stand up for the defenseless.
