Alayna is desperate to pay off her student loans, and so when the ludicrously wealthy Hudson Pierce offers financial help, she jumps at the bait—or rather, into his pants. If I don't, I will never stop reading.

It was a fantastic read I enjoyed the fact that they knew each other but she still I can't say "I really liked it" which is my definition for 4 stars, but I found the romance sensual and fulfilling, and I loved Nicolas, so I rounded up to 4. Her father, who she was very close to, sent her to Venice to study glassblowing, which her mother had resented. Not a man to run across sunny fields or lie dreaming under the moon.

Maggie Concannon isn't the kind of heroin that normally appeals to me. Books tempestuous and impulsive and argumentative and way too willing to inflict emotional pain on those nearest to .
