the police, who suspect Mark must be Art and Murder murderer, remove the debris, and proceed with the investigation-and in due course, with the inquest. The hero's tie may be a little out of the mode and the good gray inspector may arrive in a dogcart instead of a streamlined sedan with siren screaming, but what he does when he Art and Murder there is the same old futzing around with timetables and bits of charred paper and who trampled the jolly old flowering arbutus under the library window.
